Mexico police close to arrest in assault case: Reports

Authorities in Mexico claim they are close to an arrest in the savage beating of a Calgary woman staying at a five-star resort.

Sheila Nabb, 37, was found lying in pool of her own blood early Friday morning inside an elevator at the Hotel Riu Emerald Bay in Mazatlan.

Working in collaboration with local news outlet Noroeste, Metro has learned the area governor, Mario Lopez Valdez, pledged a swift resolution to the ongoing investigation Tuesday.

"He says the case is going to be resolved soon because of the information they have," said Noroeste chief reporter Francisco Cuamea.

Details regarding the assault remain scarce, but the governor did say investigators have gathered that after arriving in Mazatlan Friday, Nabb and her husband Andrew went out for drinks with fellow resort members.

After that, they returned to their room and went to bed together. Andrew has told family that when he awoke the next morning, Sheila was nowhere to be found. He later learned she had been transferred to a hospital. Sheila was initially put into a medically induced coma but awoke Tuesday and began communicating with family members, according to a statement issued by her brother, Paul Giles.

IPad study taps into teen alcohol abuse

- Researchers hope pilot project will reduce risky drinking among youth
- Plan is to use iPad to conduct surveys among teens who take trip to ER

University of Alberta researchers want teens who end up in the emergency room because of their drinking to think twice about alcohol's effects.

Assistant professors Dr. Kathryn Dong and Dr. Amanda Newton are piloting a study into the reasons and amounts teenagers drink, by way of an iPad survey the day after an ER visit.

"Teens will drink but not all teens end up in the emergency department because of a consequence related to drinking," said Newton.

She said one objective is to test if teens trust an iPad over a parent, doctor or nurse.

The project is a joint effort of the pediatrics and emergency medicine departments in the U of A's faculty of medicine and dentistry. In addition to the Stollery Children's Hospital's ER, teens are being polled after emergency visits in Halifax and Calgary.

After answering 13 questions, teens learn how their

- The Women and Children's Health Research Institute is helping fund the study.

"The pilot study isn't meant to evaluate whether it works or not, it's meant to give us some answers so that we can design an actual study that will help us figure out if it works or not," said Newton.

From Kings to angels

The Edmonton Oil Kings are fans of snow and ice, but on Tuesday they were hard at work getting rid of it.

Five players chipped at ice and shovelled snow on sidewalks at 129 Street and 108 Avenue as part of the city's Snow Angels program, which encourages residents to help others out in the winter, especially seniors and persons with disabilities.

"It's good," said team captain Mark Pysyk, 20.

"It's not much for guys that are in shape; it's not much to shovel for us."

Elvie De Benedetto, senior project planner with Capital City Cleanup, said having the team on board will raise awareness and inspire others to do the same.

"They represent positive things about winter," De

Benedetto said.

The hockey players, aged 16 to 20, will be on call between home games, said Kings vice-president Darryl Porter.

"They're role models to other people with similar abilities," said Porter. "The guys learn to really enjoy it."

Residents can obtain information or nominate someone as a Snow Angel online at edmonton.ca/snowangels or by calling 311.

Recognition this year includes a chance to win Oil Kings tickets.

This is the sixth year for the Snow Angels program.

NORTHERN GATEWAY

Protest marks start of pipeline hearings

Aboriginal drums thrummed and protesters shivered Tuesday as public hearings into the proposed $5.5-billion Northern Gateway oil pipeline started in Alberta.

"We're hoping to raise awareness that there are people in Alberta who are opposed to this pipeline as well," said Mike Hudema of Greenpeace. "What we heard in B.C. is almost unanimous opposition."

About 20 protesters carried signs as hearings inside an Edmonton hotel began with a sweet-grass ceremony.

Enbridge wants to build a 1,170-kilometre twin pipeline to carry oilsands bitumen from Alberta to Kitimat, B.C., where huge tanker ships would transport it to Asia.

PM, chiefs at odds over Indian Act

► Harper has no plans to repeal legislation ► But many native leaders see it as an obstacle to change

What was billed as a historic coming together of the federal government and First Nations began with the two sides polarized over the future of the Indian Act.

Prime Minister Stephen Harper sees the legislation as something that can be updated to reflect modern practices.

But Shawn Atleo, national chief of the Assembly of First Nations, led a parade of speakers who described the century-old legislation as a boulder blocking the path to collaboration.

They laid out their views in back-to-back speeches Tuesday during a major meeting of First Nations leaders and government ministers and officials.

The Indian Act, first passed in 1876, gave Ottawa exclusive jurisdiction over "Indians and Lands Reserved for Indians."

The legislation, which was last amended in 2000, sets out rules on everything from how reserves operate to the effect of marriage on status.

Calling the Indian Act "an act of neo-colonialism," Jody Wilson-Raybould, regional chief of B.C., said Canada's natives require "core governance reform." THE CANADIAN PRESS

Theories not enough: Defence

FRANK GUNN/THE CANADIAN PRESS

There are simply too many unknowns to be able to convict a man of four counts of first-degree murder in the deaths of his daughters and wife, a jury in Ontario heard Tuesday in a case prosecutors allege is a so-called honour killing.

The Crown alleges Mohammad Shafia, 58, one of his two wives and their son killed Shafia's three daughters and other wife. The bodies were found June 30, 2009, in a car at the bottom of a canal in Kingston,

► Mohammad Shafia

Ont., but the Crown did not present evidence specifically detailing how it believes the four died.

The Crown has suggested it believes the four were dead before the car plunged into the water, but in his closing address Tuesday Shafia's lawyer told the jury they can't rely on theories.

Court has heard evidence it appears the four females made no attempt to escape the car through an open window, and the bodies were found eerily suspended inside.

Fighting the ban

The ban was challenged by a coalition of news agencies, including the Ottawa Citizen, the Ottawa Sun, CTV, CBC and Global TV.

► Richard Dearden, who represents the media groups, called it an "important decision for freedom of the press."

► "There's a real public interest in knowing how the court is going to divide assets, like Mr. Williams' military pension, and what's going to be left over for Mr. Williams' victims to seek to enforce any judgments they will get against him in their lawsuits against him," he said.

Ontario's top court is granting an appeal of a sweeping publication ban on the divorce of convicted sex killer Russell Williams.

But most of the provisions of the ban will remain in effect for 14 days so that Williams' estranged wife can take steps to challenge the decision if she wishes, according to the 28-page decision released Tuesday by the Ontario Court of Appeal.

Mary Jane Binks, the Ottawa lawyer representing Williams' wife, said her client will take the matter to Canada's highest court. A lower-court judge had banned publication of details about the colonel's wife. THE CANADIAN PRESS

IMF cuts Canada's growth forecast

Canada's recovery is being dragged down by a cascading crisis in Europe and weakening conditions elsewhere, the International Monetary Fund suggests in its latest economic outlook.

The Washington-based monitor of global financial affairs said Tuesday that Canada's economy will likely now grow by only 1.7 per cent, more than half a point below 2011's 2.3 per cent advance. The new forecast is three notches lower than the Bank of Canada's estimate last week — and two-tenths of a point lower than the IMF's own previous call in September. The IMF doesn't see the economy in Canada strengthening much in 2013. Unlike the central bank, which predicts 2.8 per cent expansion, it says Canada's recovery will be restrained to two per cent.

That's still tops among G7 countries for the two years combined.

Women's groups condemn tabloids

► U.K. inquiry moves from hacking to the portrayal of women in media

Britain's inquiry into media ethics shifted its focus away from phone hacking Tuesday to look into how women are portrayed in U.K. newspapers.

Women's-rights campaigners told the inquiry that newspapers treat women as sex objects and mis-report cases of rape and domestic violence.

Anna Van Heeswijk of women's-campaigns group Object said that sexualized images of topless or skimpily clad women in British tabloid newspapers damage the way young women think of their appearances and lifestyles.

She said anyone who complained about the newspapers' use of these images in turn was vilified, and pointed to how The Sun newspaper called lawmaker Clare Short "fat, jealous" when she tried to stop the tabloid from printing a daily photograph of a topless woman on page 3.

"Clearly the effect has been to close down free speech in relation to groups and individuals making a critique against these newspapers," Van Heeswijk said.

Marai Larasi of campaign group End Violence Against Women said newspaper stories about attacks on women often focused on their actions, implying that somehow they had provoked their attackers. She said newspaper reports about a woman murdered by her husband after she announced a separation on social networking site Facebook focused on her actions and not her husband's violence.

"The fact that it became known as a Facebook murder is symbolic," she said. "It was the murder of a real woman by her partner."

The media-ethics inquiry was set up after revelations that Rupert Murdoch's News of the World newspaper had illegally listened to cellphone voice mails of celebrities, politicians and crime victims. New forms of press regulations are to be considered.

JUST SO WE'RE CLEAR — THEY'RE CATS

JUST SAYIN' ...

PAUL SULLIVAN
METRO

OK, class, today's question: How did we get from seeing eye dogs to emotional support animals?

Air Canada is trying to figure out how to accommodate people who insist on taking their cats on the plane and at the same time protect people who are allergic to cats.

They forgot to ask me, but the answer is obvious. Tell people to leave Kitty at home.

I have nothing against cats, but referring to them as "emotional support animals" and thereby elevating them to the status of seeing eye dogs is a stretch and a clear sign that the entitlement society needs to cough up a hairball and get real.

I realize I'm treading on wafer-thin ice, but if you want an emotional support animal, get a golden retriever. They love everybody, almost as much as they love food, and are happy to see you, especially if you come with food.

Cats, on the other hand, barely notice other species that aren't dinner. They may crawl into your lap and go to sleep, but only because it's a warm place to go to sleep. They don't discriminate, as anyone who has ever awakened to find a cat sleeping on their face can tell you.

But, even if Kitty loves you, why return the favour by stuffing Kitty in a tiny box and making her fly economy?

(Just to make it clear.

I'm an equal opportunity curmudgeon: The same goes for shih tzus and the like. Leave your adorable mutt at home in the care of a competent kennel.)

What's really annoying is this tendency to escalate beyond all reason. It's one thing to feel the urge to take Kitty to visit Aunt Bossy in Halifax, quite another to declare Kitty an "emotional support animal," raising her companionship to the level of ersatz human right. Right.

And shame on Air Canada for knuckling under. I like peanuts, but the airline had no difficulty depriving me of the tasty legume in order to protect other passengers from anaphylactic shock. As if?

Air Canada needs to know I'm addicted to peanuts. Once I start, I can't stop. Without peanuts, I'll never make it to Halifax. Those little cracker things don't fill the bill; I require emotional-support nuts.

And if I don't get them, I'll complain to my friendly neighbourhood Human Rights Commission, which never met a complaint it didn't like.

Then, I'm going into hiding.

Winners and losers

► Even before awards night, there are clearly some overlooked films heading into the Oscar season ► But there are a few big surprises, some odd nods and Canadian talent in the mix

In the first year where the number of Best Picture nominees can be anywhere between five and 10, the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences settled on nine Tuesday morning, with The Artist, The Descendants, Extremely Loud & Incredibly Close, The Help, Hugo, Midnight in Paris, Moneyball, The Tree of Life and War Horse doing battle for the big prize. Here's a look at the winners and losers heading into Oscar season.

BIGGEST WINNERS

Martin Scorsese's delightful Hugo garnered the most nominations with 11, with popular favourite The Artist right behind at 10. Stephen Spielberg's War Horse and David Fincher's The Girl with the Dragon Tattoo received six and five nominations, respectively, though neither made it into the Best Director category. But the biggest winner of is Bridesmaids — and comedy in general — with the raunchy box office hit pulling in nominations for Best Adapted Screenplay as well as Best Supporting Actress for Melissa McCarthy.

BIGGEST LOSERS

The biggest omission seems to be in the Best Animated Feature race, which Spielberg's The Adventures of Tintin has been winning handily at other awards shows. But the European favourite didn't earn a mention in this category. Outside of animation, Clint Eastwood's Oscar-bait misfire J. Edgar failed to earn a single nomination.

BIGGEST SURPRISES

The pair of nominations for Extremely Loud & Incredibly Close — Best Picture and Best Supporting Actor — seemed to come out of nowhere, as the film hasn't made an impact in any other awards races. A Better Life star Demián Bichir, who also earned a Screen Actors Guild nomination for his outstanding performance, is a welcome surprise that will hopefully bring attention to an amazing but overlooked drama. And while Iran's A Separation is unstoppable in the Foreign Language category, many expected Angelina Jolie's In the Land of Blood and Honey to at least garner a nomination, as it did at the Golden Globes.

How movies teach us about life's Grey areas

- ▶ Looking to survive a plane crash in the Andes? Or how to live as a shipwrecked loner on a tropical island?
- ▶ Just press 'play' and sit down with a bowl of popcorn

▶ A scene from The Grey, which opens Friday. The film's plot revolves around an oil drilling team that struggles to survive in the wild after a plane crash.

IN FOCUS

RICHARD CROUSE
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

This Christmas I got a book titled The Worst-Case Scenario Survival Handbook.

Contained within were tidbits of information on how to survive shark attack, a volcano eruption, even what to do when the pilot passes out leaving you to land the plane.

It's an interesting read, but I am a visual person and have learned much more about survival from watching movies than from the pages of this book.

From this weekend's The Grey, a man versus nature tale starring Liam Neeson, I learned that empty airplane booze bottles can be broken, wedged between your fingers and repurposed as Wolverine-style knuckles of death.

Hopefully I'll never have to use that trick, but it is just one of many lessons learned at the movies.

Alive, the story of Uruguay's rugby team whose plane crashed in the middle of the Andes mountains, I learned that cannibalism is a good way to stave off hunger pangs.

A similar lesson was taught in the Robert Redford film Jeremiah Johnson, based on a real-life trapper named John Johnston, nicknamed "Liver Eater Johnston" for his habit of cutting out and eating the livers of men he killed.

From the true-to-life mountain climbing movies 127 Hours and Touching the Void, I learned perseverance.

In the former a man is wedged literally between a rock and a hard place. To get free he cuts off his own arm with a pocketknife. Now that's stick-to-itiveness!

The latter sees a man with a severely broken leg crawling his way out of a deep crevice to safety.

From Cast Away, Tom Hanks's stranded-on-a-desert-isle movie, I learned how to build a raft from a portable toilet, and how, in lieu of friends, a soccer ball with a bloody handprint can be man's best friend.

Should you find yourself stranded on a snow-shoer mountain top think back to the Lance Henriksen movie Survival Quest; not only does it teach viewers to forage for food and raft raging waters, but also how to dig an ice cave to survive the bitter cold.

In case of a zombie attack the classic George A. Romero movies teach us all we need to know. Remember the rhyme: "Shoot the living dead in the head."

Should you find yourself in mortal combat with a monster, another tip learned from dozens of other horror films suggests that once you've slain the creature, don't double check to make sure it's really dead.

THE WORD

Here's the thing about The Bachelor and The Bachelorette: If you want to put yourself in a ridiculous situation by vying for the "love" of some stranger while a group of other similarly-dressed people do the same on national TV, that's fine. You are a (semi) rational adult and that's your weird bag. However, it's when kids are involved that I get the heebie-jee-bies. It was announced yesterday that Emily Maynard, the 25-year-old single mom who was the chosen one on The Bachelor with Brad Womack, but then broke up with him shortly thereafter, will now be the star of the eighth season of The Bachelorette. Although there is no word on what kind of role Maynard's six-year-old daughter will play in the series, the ABC press releases are quick to point out that Maynard is the first single mom to star in the series. Maynard's little girl also appeared on The Bachelor.

Look. It's great that single moms can be on The Bachelorette.

Heck, what about a contestant who isn't white? But isn't it confusing enough for little children when their parents date multiple people/make out half-dressed in hot tubs without being on network TV?

Let's leave that poor parent to Teen Mom, shall we?

Berry's ex charged with endangering her child

KEEP COOL Gabriel Aubry, Halle Berry's ex-boyfriend and the father of her daughter, is reportedly being investigated for criminal child endangerment and battery, according to TMZ. Law enforcement sources say Aubry allegedly shoved his nanny into a door while she was holding his and Berry's three-year-old daughter, Nahla.

Gliding through a winter wonderland

► Yellowstone National Park isn't just a summer destination ► See it from a pair of cross-country skis

Yellowstone National Park's wilderness is reclaimed when the throngs of summer tourists leave and the temperature drops below zero. Most of the park's roads and services shut down, and the landscape is transformed into a world of ice and snow.

Relatively few people venture into the park at this time, just 17,262 overnight visitors last winter compared to the nearly 1.2 million overnight stays between June and September 2010.

The wildlife re-emerges with the people gone, and wolves, foxes, swans, geese, eagles, bison and elk are more frequently seen at this time of year.

It's also a prime time for cross-country skiing. Yellowstone in winter has plenty of trails for novices and experts alike. No matter the skill level, a ski trip in Yellowstone leaves you with a sense of the park's beauty that is completely different from the busy summer months.

For $40, you can get a two-hour lesson and get outfitted with skis, boots and poles for 24 hours.

At the Old Faithful Snow Lodge and the Mammoth Hot Springs Hotel near the northern entrance, plot out your ski route. These are the only accommodations inside the park during the winter season from mid-December until the first week-end of March.

MATT VOLZ/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

There's usually plenty of space throughout the season, with Old Faithful normally running at about 70 per cent of capacity and Mammoth about 60 per cent full. The exception is Christmas, when the lodges are usually full.

Once you get to Old Faithful in winter, you're pretty much stuck there unless you pony up another $62 to take the three-hour snowcoach back to West Yellowstone. The rooms at Old Faithful are $206 a night, there's no television and reservations are a must at the one restaurant.

But the adventure begins just outside the door with the iconic geyser as the main attraction. Most wintertime visitors choose to tour the park by snowcoach or snowmobile. But there's really no better way to become immersed in the park than with a pair of skis. There are the easy outings, such as the trails around the Upper Geyser Basin just outside of the lodge. Then there are the tougher ones, including arduous trails to the Continental Divide. For those who don't want to waste any more time than necessary, and have an extra $16.50, a shuttle is available to take skiers to more distant trailheads.

As a first-year media communications student, here's the scoop.

The holidays are over and I'm back at school. During the break, I had a chance to catch up with friends who were home from university. By all accounts, they're having the time of their lives. They regaled me with stories about cool parties, wild weekend trips and antics of living in residence.

OK, am I missing something here? My post-secondary experience has been the exact opposite. Long days of classes, evenings and weekends filled with assignments and studying... pure slog!

Forget about those wild dorm parties. In my dorm there's complete silence by 9 p.m. — everyone is in their room studying or passed out from exhaustion!

I found my first end-of-semester experience overwhelming! Eight finals in four days...brutal! I spent my evenings at the campus broadcast centre cramming for exams and editing film until three in the morning. Ah, beautiful sleep... is now my idea of fun!

Was I at No Fun Tech? Had I chosen the wrong school?

Over the break, I had time to reflect on why I selected this college in the first place. I chose BCIT because it has a great media communications program.

I wanted a program that focused on practical training in addition to the academics. The program covers both aspects and students can be secure in the knowledge they'll be well prepared to enter the job force. BCIT has one of the best track records of producing top graduates who are sought after by employers.

courses a semester, I'm taking eight, resulting in 16 courses a term plus a practicum. Yeah, no wonder I'm tired!

I reminded myself, I'll have two years experience working in the industry by the time my university friends even graduate.

Yes, I definitely made the right decision.

Nobody said it was going to be easy. You know the saying, "What doesn't kill you, makes you stronger." Well, by the time I graduate, I should be Hercules!

METRO WORLD NEWS IN NEW YORK

When he's not operating on patients, hosting a talk show or authoring books, Dr. Mehmet Oz devotes his time to his charity, HealthCorps, a Peace Corps-like program that sends college grads into high schools to mentor students on health and well-being.

Why is peer-to-peer mentoring the right approach to take to teach kids about their health?

Well, part of it is because I have kids. I was asked by their school to give a talk to them once about 10 years ago, and they seemed sort of bored but I gave the talk anyway. The next day, as I got to the hospital, I had probably a dozen phone calls from corporate executives, lawyers [and] other doctors saying their kids had come home that night and had told them things like "If you have a piece of bread, it's like having a candy bar."

And it began a process in my mind: If we can get these kids to talk with each other in a way that makes it cool to push back against your parents, they'll do it.

I'm not the one to deliver that message, but I can get college kids to do it.

What are your goals for the program, and what are you doing to reach them?

I want to have HealthCorps schools in every major city in America, and I want to have them in every state. We may not be in every school, and I think one of the things we're learning is that we can develop [the] best practices from the many schools we're in that other schools can adopt and begin to use in their own programs. We're gonna call it HealthCorps University. So either you'll have one of my volunteers in your school who will teach your kids about health, and (for) anybody else, health teachers can take the syllabus and use it on their own.

Sandwich that chicken breast

► This lunch boasts the picante flavour of curry, which works well with chicken ► Adding a dash of orange juice helps to fight colds

Looking for a new idea for your lunch that will help to keep that winter cold away?

This tasty chicken sandwich sings of orange flavour with a hint of curry, which makes for a perfect twist to a sandwich classic, with added health benefits.

Preparation:

1 In skillet heat oil over medium-high heat and cook onion and garlic for 3 minutes or until starting to soften. Add chicken, curry powder, coriander and turmeric; cook, stirring for 2 minutes. Whisk cornstarch into orange juice and add to skillet; bring to boil. Reduce heat and simmer for about 5 minutes or until chicken is no longer pink inside.

2 Remove from heat and stir in yogurt, coriander, chutney, salt and pepper.

3 Spread mixture over 1 naan bread and top with spinach. Top with other naan and cut in quarters to serve.

Federer, Nadal will meet in semifinal

A dominating win by Roger Federer in his 1,000th career match and a more difficult workout for Rafael Nadal set up a rare Grand Slam marquee semifinal between the former top-ranked players. Federer and Nadal have been on opposite halves of the draw since the 2005 French Open.

Sports in brief

The Edmonton Eskimos re-signed all-star receiver Fred Stamps to a new contract on Tuesday.

The deal will keep Stamps in Edmonton through the 2013 season.

Stamps was the team's leading pass catcher last year with 82 receptions for 1,153 yards and eight touchdowns in 15 games.

Terms of the contract were not released by the club.

Fielder and Tigers agree to nine-year contract worth $214 million US, source says

Free agent first baseman Prince Fielder and the Detroit Tigers agreed Tuesday on a nine-year, $214 million US contract that fills the AL Central champions' need for a power hitter, a person familiar with the deal said.

CBS first reported the agreement.

The person told The Associated Press that the deal was subject to a physical. The person spoke on condition of anonymity because the contract was not yet complete.

Detroit boldly stepped up in the Fielder sweepstakes after the recent knee injury to star Victor Martinez. A week ago, the Tigers announced that the productive designated hitter could miss the entire season after tearing his left ACL during off-season conditioning.

The Tigers won their division by 15 games before losing in the AL championship series to Texas.

Adding the 27-year-old Fielder gives the Tigers two of the game's premier sluggers, pairing him with Miguel Cabrera.

With Cabrera and Fielder, Detroit will begin this season with two players under age 30 with at least 200 career homers. According to STATS LLC, that's happened only once before. At the start of the 1961 season, the Milwaukee Braves featured 29-year-old Eddie Matthews (338 homers) and 27-year-old Hank Aaron (219).

Fielder has averaged 40 homers and 113 RBIs over the past five years.

POWER SELLS

BUT THE TRICK IS SELLING THE RIGHT KIND

Building and selling cars in today's economic climate is one thing. Forcing new technology into the marketplace is quite another considering the risk-reward scenario. Billions of dollars spent on untested, unproven and ever-changing markets.

Despite the focus on electric cars and other forms of alternative fuel and all the money spent developing it, the simple fact is that if buyers have cheaper and more convenient options — especially when cash and credit are already tight — they will take that alternative just about every time.

The budding electric-vehicle market sounds tempting and even exciting, but the vehicles are pricey, don't go very far on a charge, it can take several hours for a top-up and there's the bigger question about where to top up when you are away from home. For the short term, electric cars will be small and limited to short highway jaunts and in-city driving.

More relevant to the masses for the 2012 model year are the obvious fuel-economy strides made on the cars we are more likely to buy: Internal combustion and gas-electric hybrids that blend gasoline engines with helper electric motors to seriously cut consumption.

When it comes to internal combustion, automakers have handled the fuel-economy challenge in four key ways: Cutting the flab; going with smaller engines (and bolting on power adders where necessary, such as superchargers and turbochargers); adding transmission gears to increase an engine's mechanical advantage and reduce the revs on the highway; and new engine technology such as direct fuel injection and start-stop, which shuts off the car when it's not moving.

Each provides incremental gains in fuel economy, but when all are implemented, the gains are worth more than the sum of their parts.

And this has become normal in the car business, to the point that the money spent developing fuel-saving tech is not generally affecting the price of new vehicles, aside from the modest year-over-year increases.

We say generally because the price of entry-level cars is on the rise, ironically due to buyer economics as they downshift into smaller, cheaper and more fuel-efficient cars.

But they are also dramatically better cars than they were a few years ago, some with spectacular design touches and sexy sells.

The challenge is in the luxury leagues, where cutting cylinders and power in the interest of fuel economy makes the big price tags tough for buyers to swallow, since the industry has conditioned us to believe that more cylinders will cost you more, and in the luxury leagues it can be tens of thousands of dollars more.

So, is high-powered fun a thing of the past? Oddly, there's quite a bit more fun in a couple of categories as horsepower levels — which are often tied to efficiency improvements — dramatically climb. The 2012 Camaro ZL1, for example is pegged at 580 horsepower, granted those "fun" examples seem fewer and farther between, even as the average V6 now makes 300 horsepower.

In that context, fun is all around us.

So, for 2012, it's a mixed bag of fancy new wagons, the culling of poor-selling and inefficient models, the arrival of sleek small cars from most of the major automakers, and raucous power in small doses.

And this makes 2012 one of the most interesting new-car seasons of the last decade.

DRIVEN TO NEXT LEVEL

LEXUS CT 200H RESPONDS TO DEMANDS OF LUXURY DRIVER

The Lexus CT 200h is the world's first luxury hybrid sportback, featuring agile handling and performance, a starting price of $30,950 (which is the same as the 2011), luxurious design, driver-focused interior, and excellent fuel efficiency.

Based almost entirely on parent Toyota's four-door Prius, the HS 250h has gone through a thorough reworking of the chassis, suspension and technology systems to make them worthy of the brand. The styling is about as far from the Prius as you can get.

The headlights, grille and front bumpers follow the same cues as the HS, while the rear looks like a shrunken RX. The wide-mouthed front, low-ride height and 17-inch wheels are supposed to promise a more sporting drive, but the standard powertrain is not about that.

While the HS gets a 2.4-litre internal-combustion engine, the CT comes with the Prius's 1.8-litre four-cylinder, boosted with a 27-kilowatt electric motor, which combines to deliver 134 horsepower. The CT is a front driver with a continually variable transmission. The zero-to-100-km/h time of 10 seconds is rather leisurely, but fuel efficiency is a strong suit, helped by the CT's ability to drive on electric power alone at 50 km/h for up to 1.5 kilometres.

Those drivers looking for more feedback would be wise to choose the new-for-2012 F Sport package that includes a tighter suspension, unique 17-inch wheels, blacked-out grille, along with leather sport seats, aluminum pedals and metallic trim. The extra $5,400 might seem steep, but the $8,400 Technology

| IS 350 sedan — $44,950 (est.) base price, including destination.

WHAT TO EXPECT LATER THIS YEAR

- After the recent destruction in Japan, the big news is that there's still a Lexus.
- Hybrids rule the Lexus roost as the latest CT 200h compact strikes a chord with buyers.

- New ES 350 likely coming for 2013.
- Expect a new GS sedan to arrive mid-year sporting a maximum of six pistons.

Package adds premium sound system, satnav, leather and a power moonroof.

"The CT 200h responds to the demands of a new luxury customer — one who is urban aware and desires road-hugging performance and class-leading fuel efficiency, plus all the rewards of a luxury vehicle that suits their modern lifestyle," said Larry Hutchinson, director of Lexus in Canada. "This year, we've taken the world's first luxury hybrid sportback to the next level. The available F-Sport package enhances the performance of the CT 200h while adding distinctive styling cues that speak to this advanced hybrid's fun to drive character."

Big off-roaders such as the GX 460 features a 301-horsepower, 4.6-litre V8 that replaced the 263-horsepower, 4.7-litre V8. Fuel economy is 14.1/9.8 (city/highway) l/100 km, a slight improvement that has as much to do with the six-speed automatic transmission that replaced the five-speed automatic.

This heavy-duty off-roader is based on parent Toyota's 4Runner's ladder-frame chassis, but, being a Lexus, it takes the off-road experience to a more luxurious level. As for the items that pamper, the GX features dual-zone climate control, power sunroof, integrated running boards, multi-adjustable power front seats, a nine-speaker premium sound system, a backup camera and plenty of wood trim.

Mercedes SLK-Class: Roadster — $67,500 (est.) base price, including destination.

LUXURY AT ITS FINEST

MERCEDES OFFERS MANY MODELS AND ENGINE VARIETIES TO CHOOSE FROM

Many people think that Mercedes-Benz makes a few luxury cars. The truth is it makes 12 different ones (not including the huge number of sub models and their various powertrains), which is nearly as many car models as both Ford and Chevrolet build, combined.

So, when the company decides to fully redesign four of them, it's big news, beginning with the smallest model. In the face of the slick Audi A5 and the BMW 3-series coupe, and even the Infiniti G37, Mercedes-Benz launches a sultry new two-door coupe with four-, six- and eight-cylinder power. This is a far cry from the small C-Class coupe of old: The new car is larger (and runs on the same platform as the sedan), more stylish and much more elegant.

The base engine is a new turbocharged 201-horsepower, 1.8-litre four-cylinder. The sedan also adds this engine to the inventory as does the new SLK roadster, no doubt to help prop up the the company's fleet-economy numbers. The coupe can also be had with 302-horsepower, 3.5-litre V6 (up from 268) as well as the 451-horsepower, 6.3-litre V8. All engines use seven-speed automatic transmissions.

Where the sedan deviates is with its exclusive 3.0-litre V6 option, with 228 horsepower and all-wheel-drive. It's the only all-wheel drive model in the entire C-Class range.

In terms of price, the CLS slots

E-Class: Coupe — $61,700

HOT NEWS FROM MERCEDES FOR 2012

- Four brand-new models include the C-Class coupe, CLS sedan, M-Class sport utility and SLK roadster.
- Turbo four-cylinder introduced as the base engine in the C-Class and the new SLK.
- SL cuts out its V12 options.

- Previous 268-horsepower V6 leaps to 302 in many models.
- Smaller turbo V8 replaces the 5.5 in most models.
- More transmission gears, better economy.
- Still the king of engine variety.

between the mid-line E-class and top-of-the-line S-class. On the truck side of the balance sheet, the new M-Class remains as rugged an upscale off-road rover as ever, but now adds more style, performance and technology to the mix.

The recrafted sheet metal represents a quantum leap forward, especially the classier hood, fenders and grille, plus the cleanly sculpted door and fender body panels that contain some much needed definition.

On the inside, fully loaded models display wood trim, the stitched leather seat covers are inviting and the satin-nickel garnish subtly restrained.

Initially, there will be just two M-Class editions. The ML350 BlueTEC 4MATIC comes with a new 3.0-litre V6 turbo-diesel that's good for a fuel-economy gain of about three per cent. It generates 240 horsepower and 455 pound-feet of torque, compared to the outgoing 3.0's 210 horses and 400 pound-feet. Also available is a 3.5-litre V6 in the ML350 4MATIC that's rated at 302 horsepower, a 34-horsepower uptick from the previous 268 rating.

The redesigned SLK gets the same V6, but there is also a base turbocharged four-cylinder for 2012, rated at 201 horsepower. It looks much different, but it's similar in size to the 2011 model, while the distance between the front and rear wheels is identical.

LANCER'S NEW LOOK

Mitsubishi has picked the cars it wants to keep in its lineup and it's not good news for the Galant, Endeavor and Eclipse. But it can only mean that new product is in the works and we can only hope whatever is in the pipeline is as off-the-wall as Mitsubishi's new electric small car, the i-MiEV.

Although not major news for the 2012 model year, the compact Lancer sedan offers a new SE trim level with the sole aim of giving Canadians a fighting chance when running up against Old Man Winter. It comes with the base 148-horsepower, 2.0-litre four-cylinder.

What makes the SE significant is the standard all-wheel drive along with your choice of a five-speed manual transmission, or optional continuously variable unit (CVT). Other SE features consist of heated front seats and outside mirrors and added interior/exterior trim pieces.

Here are some other features of the 2012 Lancer:

ALL WHEEL CONTROL SYSTEM

2.0 L I4 MIVEC ENGINE

The advanced DOHC MIVEC aluminum block engine provides exceptional fuel economy and significantly reduced emissions without sacrificing sporty performance.

710-WATT ROCKFORD FOSGATE PREMIUM SOUND SYSTEM

High-performance 6-CD/MP3 player plays through nine speakers, including a 10-inch subwoofer. The PUNCH control and Digital Signal Processor (DSP) give total control over "punch" level and provides custom music-genre equalization, as well as sound field image settings.

SPORTONIC STEERING WHEEL MAGNESIUM-ALLOY PADDLE SHIFTERS (CVT)

Lightweight, racing-inspired magnesium paddle shifters offer real hands-on performance. Pull the right paddle to upshift the Continuously Variable Transmission (CVT) and the left paddle to downshift.

Chrysler 200 mid-size convertible — $31,400 (est.)
 base price, including destination.

NOT HORISING AROUND

LOUD & PROUD, REFRESHED CHRYSLER CARS LOOK BRAND NEW

Even if it was intended as a stop-gap measure, the refreshed Chrysler car line basically looks brand new. The 200 is a heavily worked over version of the Sebring, while the 300 was smoothed into an elegant looking downtown car more in tune with the image of what a Chrysler should be.

Now, whether that image includes a 470-horsepower, 6.4-litre “Hemi” V8 is entirely subjective, but the rear-wheel drive SRT8 is back for 2012. Loud and proud, it rides on 20-inch wheels, tops out at 280 km/h and burns to 60 mph (96 km/h) in less than five seconds.

Compared to the previous SRT8’s 6.1-litre V8, there’s an extra 80 pound-feet of torque at 2,900 revs per minute, which makes for spirited part-throttle around-town driving. A 21 per cent fuel economy increase on the highway is achieved by use of a new-for-2012 active-valve exhaust system that allows the standard Fuel Saver Technology (four-cylinder mode) to engage over a wider rpm range.

As a treat to the ears, the new exhaust system opens up under higher loads. The SRT8 shifts through a five-speed automatic transmission, but the

NEW FOR 2012

- All four Chrysler models, although not new for the 2011 model year, were modified enough feel like new cars.
- Latest arrival is the 200 convertible.
- It seems fitting the “Imported from Detroit” Chrysler 300 SRT8 packs 470 horses.
- Standard leather seating for Town & Country.
- 3.6-litre V6 saves Chrysler’s bacon in the powertrain department.

whole package would be better if the new eight-speed automatic transmission for the V6 cars could be fitted to the V8. The eight-speed helps the standard 292-horsepower, 3.6-litre V6 achieve 7.6 l/100 km on the highway versus 8.7 with the five-speed auto.

The “Pentastar,” as it’s called, is Chrysler’s new standard and is used in everything from the Jeep Wrangler to the Dodge Grand Caravan to the Chrysler 200. With Ford developing its new 300-plus horsepower 3.7-litre V6 and General Motors working its 3.6 past 320 horsepower in some cases, Chrysler’s 3.6 arrived not a moment too soon. Without it, the company might have been dead in the water and deemed non-competitive.

The same engine can be found in the lighter 200 convertible where it’s mated to a six-speed automatic transmission. Actually, it’s only about 45 kilograms lighter than the 300. The 200’s smoother front and rear styling and LED lamps are shared with the sedan, but the two-door body style is unique to the convertible.

As before, customers have the option of either a standard soft top or an optional folding metal hard top or in the two top trims. The latter is probably the choice for Northern climes since it’s better equipped to handle inclement weather.

Inside, it shares the changes made to the sedan’s cabin, including a redesigned instrument panel and supportive seats. There is also plenty of what Chrysler calls “soft-touch” features, such as the armrests. The base engine is a 173-horsepower, 2.4-litre four-cylinder.

THE STAR OF THE SHOW

All 2012 Kizashi's now include AWD!

ENJOY POWER OF CONTROL WITH SUZUKI'S KIZASHI SEDAN

The four-door Kizashi has been the star of the Suzuki show since its arrival for the 2010 model year. In terms of size, the family-oriented Kizashi slots almost exactly halfway between compacts such as the Honda Civic, Mazda3 and Toyota Corolla and their larger Honda Accord, Mazda6 and Toyota Camry siblings.

Visually, the wrap-around grille and hood appear influenced by Suzuki's SX4 model and the short rear deck and hunkered-down suspension certainly transmit a sporty vibe.

Inside, there are well-bolstered front seats and the split-folding rear seat provides a decent amount of room in back for two adults.

The one and only engine is the 180-horsepower, 2.4-litre four-cylinder that drives all four wheels using a continuously variable transmission (FWD versions and accompanying manual gearboxes are no longer offered).

Base S models come with quite a bit of comfy stuff, including climate control, power-adjustable front seats, push-button start, seven-speaker audio system, Bluetooth wireless connectivity and eight airbags.

The mid-range SX adds a power sunroof, Rockford-Fosgate premium audio system plus leather-covered seats (heated in front), backup warning and 18-inch wheels (17-inch rims are standard), while the Kizashi Sport features a sport-tuned suspension, unique alloy rims and a rear spoiler.

| BMW Z4 Roadster — $56,300 (est.) base price, including destination.

SIMPLY BEAMING

BMW HOT RELEASES INCLUDE Z4 ROADSTER, 5-SERIES SEDAN

As is the case with Audi and Mercedes-Benz, BMW's focus has turned from larger wagons and sport utility vehicles to updating the car line for 2012, and we're not just talking about two hot releases.

Both the BMW Z4 roadster and the mid-sized 5-series sedan have new base four-cylinder engines, each fitted with a turbocharger to add passing power to what would be an otherwise too-small-for-the-application engine. It's the way of the future. Look for it in the next 3 Series car line (a new larger sedan arrives this winter) and in the new-for-2012 X1 compact wagon that's here now.

Visually, you could easily confuse the new X1 xDrive28i with BMW's existing X3, so similar is the physical resemblance. However, the X1 is shorter and narrower by about 20 centimetres and 7.5 centimetres, respectively, and five centimetres shorter between the front and rear wheels.

The X1 doesn't come up short in interior accommodations, though. The front seats feel wonderfully supportive, as they do with most BMWs, while rear-seat leg and knee room might only be a problem for tall types.

The 2.0-litre, turbocharged four-cylinder — as in the Z4 and 5 Series — puts out a very respectable 241 horsepower and 258 pound-feet of torque. All X1's come with permanent all-wheel drive that splits the torque equally between the

| 5 Series: Full-size sedan — $58,900 (est.)

MORE NEWS FROM BMW FOR 2012

- New entry-level X1 opens the world of all-wheel-drive BMWs to more buyers.
- New larger 3 Series arriving in February.
- Turbocharged four-cylinder the new standard engine in the 5 Series, Z4 and upcoming 3 Series.

- 1M coupe flows M3 performance into smaller, six-cylinder package.
- X6 and 7 Series so far the only two BMWs to offer hybrid options.

front and rear wheels in normal driving, but can shift 100 per cent of the torque to whichever axle has the most grip.

To hold the starting price in the low-$40,000 territory, the base X1 is on the stark side, devoid of leather seats, fancy interior/exterior trim and a number mechanical/safety features.

On the option list is a panoramic glass roof, larger-diameter rims, heated leather seats, up-level audio/navigation system and a sport steering wheel with paddle shifters for the automatic transmission. Also offered is an aero body kit that is part of the M sports package.

Speaking of M — which means Motorsports — the buzz around the 1 Series car line involves the sporty 1M with performance that rivals the larger V8-powered M3.

The 1M's calling card is the giant wheel/tire package covered by stretched fender lips on all four corners. For this model, the turbocharged six-cylinder makes 335 horsepower and the transmission is a six-speed manual. All this fun will set you back about $55,600, so you have to wonder just how much fun you would have for $40,000 more.

For $97,500, the new 6 Series Coupe and Convertible are gorgeous and the beauty extends inside with a finely tailored interior and control panel that can be had with a higher resolution head-up display that projects vital vehicle information onto the windshield. There's a huge list of safety equipment and electronics to keep you out of harm's way, but a car like this needs a great stereo: The optional 16-speaker, 1,200-watt Bang & Olufsen system.

Mini Coupé — $27,550 (est.) base price, including destination.

THE MINIEST MINI OF ALL

After spending considerable resources building Minis with actual passenger room and better all-weather performance — Minis that aren't so mini — Mini goes and builds the tiniest Mini of all.

In the marque's storied 50-year-plus history it has never built a two-seat model, much less a car that shuns the squared-off look in favour of a rounded roofline. Still, the new Coupé appears every inch a Mini, especially the lower body area that looks as if it was lifted from the classic Mini production line. The only key dimension that has shrunk is the height, due to the Coupé's less up-right windshield.

The signature design piece and easily the most controversial is its "helmet" look roof that, for added emphasis, is painted in a contrasting colour. In place of the squared-off liftgate for regular Minis, the Coupé features a large hatchback that opens very wide and very high to accommodate a reasonable amount of cargo. This space can be further extended by a pass-through to the cabin.

Built into the edge of the cargo door is an active spoiler (with manual override controls) that automatically extends whenever the Coupé exceeds 80 km/h and applies up to 40 kilograms of downforce. Running counter to the Coupé's performance persona is the fact that it weighs some 25 kilograms more than its four-passenger counterpart.

LOCAL DEALER

MINI Edmonton, 7450 Roper Rd., 780-434-MINI (6464).

As it turns out, though, the Coupé is actually based on the Cabriolet's (convertible's) reinforced platform, minus some extra bracing behind the seats.

The Coupé is certainly the sportiest of Minis and the suspension settings have been adjusted to reflect this characteristic. There is also an available sports suspension package with extra-stiff shocks and thicker anti-sway bars for those enjoy shaking their fillings loose.

The powertrain lineup is no different than every other Mini's. Base models are fitted with a 121-horsepower, 1.6-litre four-cylinder, while the S features a 181-horse turbocharged version of the 1.6. At the top is the JCW (John Cooper Works) edition that pumps out 208 horsepower from its turbo motor. The JCW also adds a body kit, Brembo-brand brakes, distinctive alloy wheels and a fancier interior. Transmission choices for all models consist of a six-speed manual, or optional six-speed automatic.

Coupé pricing starts at $27,550, which is nearly four grand more than a base hardtop Cooper Classic. For the no-boundaries adventurous, your Coupé carriage awaits. — wheelbasemedia.com

MEET THE NEW PORSCHE 911

Porsche's popularity has never been greater and its future more certain, due in large measure to a complete understanding of its customers and exactly what it takes to keep them coming back for more.

Take the all-new 911, for example. Its new sheet metal, although familiar looking, gives the coupe a more contemporary appearance, with dramatically flared fenders, wider stance and almost zero gaps between the wheels and the fender openings.

To keep the weight in check, the 911 makes extensive use of aluminum to form the door panels, trunk lid and roof. The dashboard is modern and highly detailed and includes, for the first time, an electronically controlled emergency brake instead of a conventional ratcheting lever.

The base Carrera has been fitted with a 350-horsepower, 3.4-litre horizontally opposed six-cylinder engine (H6). It replaces the previous year's 345-horsepower, 3.6-litre H6. Joining the Carrera is the 911 Carrera S that employs a 3.8-litre six-cylinder that carries over from 2011, but produces 400 horses, up from 385.

Both engines can be mated to the first-ever seven-speed manual transmissions, or optional seven-speed automated manual transmissions that deliver split-second up and downshifts.

The rest of the squad, including cabriolet and turbo versions, must wait their turn before being presented to prospective owners.

Elsewhere, both the Boxster S roadster and Cayman S coupe can be ordered in limited-production Black Editions that come equipped with all-black bodies and wheels, unique trim and mildly more-powerful engines. A slightly lowered ride height and fixed rear wing are also part of the package.

In addition, the relatively new Cayman R — the hard top equivalent to the Boxster Spyder — has also entered production. As with the Spyder, superfluous items such as air conditioning and the audio system have been excised, while the door panels are made from lightweight aluminum and the seats are carbon-fiber buckets. Although street legal, the R is much more at home on the racetrack where many of its buyers will likely wind up. — wheelbasemedia.com

JAGUAR STANDS APART

Since it was acquired by India's Tata Group, the Jaguar brand has carved out a decidedly British presence, along with plenty of fresh styling ideas.

The XJ was made over for the 2011 model year and now somewhat resembles the smaller XF. Both share a similar mesh-style grille, although the XJ's snout and hood extend well forward of the front wheels and the windshield appears more steeply raked.

The exciting bodywork, including a built-in panoramic glass roof, represents high fashion of the first order and sets the Jag defiantly apart from its European and Asian rivals. Up to five passengers are treated to a confluence of sumptuous leather seat cushions, genuine wood trim and crisp metallic brightwork.

The body structure uses 50 per cent recycled aluminum that contributes to the car's relatively light 1,840-kilogram base curb weight. Both regular- and extended-wheelbase versions of the XJ can also be ordered with a choice of three V8 engines that originate with the smaller XF.

The starting point is a 385-horsepower, 5.0-litre unit, while optional is a supercharged 5.0 that slingshots output to 470 horsepower. At the top is a 510-horsepower version of the 5.0 that belongs to the XJ Supersport. A six-speed automatic transmission is standard across the line.

As for the smaller (and older) XF, Jaguar has done a little reverse engineering to make it look more like the bigger XJ. More sculpted headlamps now incorporate light-emitting-diode (LED) running lights, while the lower valance features three separate air intakes with chrome trim over the foglights. The rear lights are LEDs, too, and the rear bumper and valance have been subtly reshaped.

XK: TWO-DOOR COUPE/ROADSTER; $100,000 (COUPE); $107,000 (ROADSTER); $140,500 (XKR-S)

XF has the same engine options as the XJ. At the top is a 510-horse version reserved for the high-speed XFR that also gets restyled 20-inch wheels, sport suspension, more capable brakes and its own updated body bits and insignia for 2012.

For the 2012 model year, you can also order the new top XKR-S, which hits 60 mph (96 km/h) in 4.2 seconds and ups the top speed to 298 km/h.

LAND ROVER GETS SERIOUS AGAIN

Land Rover has always been about living the good life in a big way with vehicles that can take you anywhere. While the LR2 was an attempt to cash in on the Land Rover name with a smaller, less expensive model for the masses, the name of the game these days is style, less size and good fuel economy.

In the face of crushing competition treading all over its turf, it's time for Land Rover to get serious. The automaker's sporty new Evoque, available in two-door coupe and four-door wagon body styles, appears more like a sport wagon derivative of a compact passenger car.

The Evoque is slightly shorter than a Hyundai Tucson, Ford Escape, or Jeep Patriot and about 45 centimetres shorter than a Range Rover Sport. With its short front and rear overhang and ample ground clearance, becoming hung up over uneven terrain or stuck in some muddy bog in an Evoque would seem remote.

BASE PRICES

INCLUDING DESTINATION:

EVOQUE: ENTRY-LUXURY SPORT UTILITY; $47,000

LR2: COMPACT SPORT UTILITY; $44,950

LR4: MID-SIZE SPORT UTILITY; $59,990

RANGE ROVER: FULL-SIZE SPORT UTILITY; $94,300

RANGE ROVER SPORT: FULL-SIZE SPORT UTILITY; $73,200

Its all-new Ford-based 240-horsepower, 2.0-litre turbocharged four-cylinder engine operates through a six-speed automatic transmission. Range Rover claims the Evoque will squirt from zero to 60 mph (96 km/h) in 7.1 seconds, no doubt aided by some significant weight-reducing measures that include the use of plastic front fenders and rear liftgate, aluminum hood and roof panels plus various suspension components.

On- and off-road traction comes from a full-time all-wheel drive system with an electronically controlled centre differential that varies the torque between the front and rear wheels, depending on where the grip is greatest.

How you dress the Evoque depends on which trim level is selected. The base Pure contains most basic entry-luxury goodies plus an eight-inch touch-screen display module for operating a variety of standard or optional temperature, audio, hands-free telephone and navigation systems.

The Prestige adds a leather-covered interior its own distinctive 19-, or optional 20-inch wheels, while the Dynamic features its own unique 20-inch wheels plus unique bumpers, grille and perforated leather seats.

Evoque pricing begins at $47,000, or $52,600 for the coupe. That makes it about $2,100 more than the LR2, which is the least expensive Land Rover on the market.

The Volvo-sourced 3.2-litre inline six-cylinder engine still pushes a competitive 230 horsepower through a six-speed automatic transmission. On the other hand, the bigger and beefier LR4 runs with a 375-horsepower, 5.0-litre V8 and six-speed automatic transmission.

Numerous upgrades to the suspension, braking and steering were done for the 2011 redesign, and the Terrain Response system, which optimizes the traction and stability-control programs plus the anti-lock brakes according to road or trail conditions, is still the best in the business.

Fuel miser

The Skyactiv's performance is achieved from a higher-than-usual 12.0:1 compression ratio. Normally this would necessitate a premium-gasoline diet, but changes to the fuel management and engine design allow it to burn lower-octane — and less expensive — regular fuel.

The Skyactiv's six-speed automatic is the real fuel miser here with a consumption rating of 7.1 l/100 km city and 4.9 highway.

That's a major improvement over the 8.7/6.0 rating of the five-speed-automatic/base-2.0 combo.

Peppier ride

A few hundred kilometres of seat time confirms that the nature of the Mazda3 has changed for the better.

Although hardly a rocket ship (check out the 263-horsepower Mazdaspeed3 if that's your pleasure), the new model drives in a much sportier manner and certainly feels peppier.

Engine

Compared to the standard Mazda3, there's a revised — as in more aerodynamic — nose and tail. There's also a new Skyactiv 2.0-litre four-cylinder engine that's brimming with high-tech tricks.

It produces 155 horsepower and 148 pound-feet of torque. The base non-Skyactiv 2.0-litre engine makes 148 horsepower and 135 pound-feet of torque and is only available in base of the sedan. The optional 167-horsepower 2.5-litre four-cylinder also carries over in both sedan and hatch.

Forget hybrids: Mazda's not giving up on gas

MALCOLM GUNN
DRIVE@METRONews.ca
WHEELBASE MEDIA

It's common for automakers to give labels to their more fuel-efficient offerings, whether that efficiency is real or perceived. It's marketing and sales at its finest.

There's Ford's EcoBoost line of engines as well as Chevrolet's Ecotec and eAssist. And of course there's Toyota's Hybrid Synergy Drive electric/gas system.

Mazda, however, has taken the name game one step further by branding a whole car with its new "Skyactiv" magic wand.

The rationale behind this approach is straightforward. Mazda thinks traditional gasoline and diesel engines will remain the most popular form of automotive propulsion for the next few years. It therefore makes sense to continue refining those powerplants to be more efficient rather than spending millions of dollars on alternative-fuel vehicles, which make up a tiny slice of the pie.

Fair enough, but the reality is that other manufacturers are also refining internal combustion while still finding the resources to explore hybrids and electrics. Just look at the Chevrolet Volt. But what you won't read elsewhere is that Skyactiv is really a wholesale approach to a better driving experience with a reengineered chassis, transmissions and steering.

Fuel economy is just one aspect.

It might be time to drive the dream

▶ Auto show season kicks off the right way in Detroit ▶ With automakers feeling bullish, we stand to reap the benefits

MALCOLM GUNN
DRIVE@METRONWS.CA
WHEELBASE MEDIA

The Honda executive presenting the new Acura NSX supercar never stood a chance.

During the media days that preceded the 2012 North American International Auto Show, which wrapped up Jan. 21, he "kindly" invited the Detroit audience of journalists onto the stage for a look. Well, ask and ye shall receive: a flash mob of assorted scribes and photographers stampeded their way to their quarry with cameras blazing.

"I really thought the presenter was going to be trampled," said a nearby Honda public-relations type. This type of excitement is a rare sight at any auto show, and within three years the NSX concept will transform into a production hybrid halo car for Honda's premium division.

Before the unveiling, at the opposite end of Detroit's Cobo Hall, Mark Templin, general manager of Toyota's upscale Lexus division, had warmed up the press with the flashy LF-LC hybrid sports-car concept, which is rumoured to be production-bound.

Sandwiched between these exotic automotive bookmarks were two more sports cars that share the same basic architecture and powerplants. Both the rear-wheel-drive Subaru ▶ Hyundai's new-look 2013 Genesis Coupe.

BRZ and the FR-S that Toyota will market under the Scion label will go on sale later this year.

And providing a sidebar to all this sporty action was Hyundai's 2013 Genesis Coupe and Veloster hatchback. The Genesis features new looks and significantly added power for both the base 2.0-litre turbocharged four-cylinder and the 3.8-litre V-6. Both powerplants also receive new eight-speed automatic transmissions to augment the standard manual transmissions. Meanwhile, the 2013 Veloster can be had with a turbocharged version of its 1.6-litre engine that bumps the power to 201 ponies from 138.

The predominantly special-interest machinery provides a clear indication that the global community of automakers is feeling decidedly bullish about the future and is enthusiastically releasing plenty of new stuff, from ultra-green electrics to pricey exotics and everything in between.

Filling that "in-between" area is the traditional four-door sedan, which represents the sweet spot for car companies where volume sales drive revenues and the competition.

In this arena, Ford's 2013 Fusion sedan is very big news indeed. It's clearly influenced by the Aston Martin Rapide, Audi A7 and other high-end four-door "coupe" designs, but still it manages to look singularly spectacular.

The Fusion will be offered in front- and all-wheel-drive and with a choice of manual and automatic transmissions. There will be two turbocharged four-cylinder gasoline engines and one non-turbo four-cylinder engine, in addition to gas-electric hybrid and plug-in hybrid models. No other brand comes close to matching the Fusion for powertrain variety.

For added luxury, the equally elegant 2013 Lincoln MKZ will provide similar looks in a more upscale package. The MKZ and Fusion traditionally share the same platform.

Another premium offering is the 2013 Cadillac ATS sedan that's a step down in size from the CTS. Available engines include a 200-horsepower four-cylinder, a 270-horsepower turbocharged

Whimsical

▶ Despite the fact that auto shows in general are more reality based than they used to be, this year's auto-show season will provide plenty of purely whimsical concepts. For example, BMW has its i3 electric and stunning i8 hybrid concepts and the Smart brand is showing a wacky electric hauler called the Forus. As well, Toyota's NS4 hybrid provides a possible clue as to how much better the next-generation Prius might look.

four-cylinder and a 318-horsepower V-6. The ATS is touted as being a competitor to the BMW Series sedan, which is certainly a tall order.

If the Detroit show is any indication, however, this year there will be very few new trucks or tall wagons running the circuit, which is really no surprise based on recent trends that have both buyers and automakers thinking about size, fuel economy and bang for the buck.

Still, it's rare to see the kind of stage-trampling excitement that the NSX concept garnered, which, coupled with a healthy year for the auto industry and slight economic improvement, could mean that more people are thinking about driving the dream.

Behold the Acura NSX, which caused a stampede in Detroit. The concept is set to become the long-awaited successor to the 1991-'05 car.

PRIUS-C LOOKS TO EXPAND HYBRID LOVE

AUTO PILOT

MIKE GOETZ
DRIVE
@METRONEWS.CA

Hybrid sales are steadily increasing. But it's been a tough slog, like the road under them has been curiously strewn with chicken fat, or some other equally slippery substance.

Hybrids still seem only to attract those "early adopters" of technology. Mainstream buyers still stay away in droves.

Will mainstream buyers ever make the shift?

I put that question to Jim Lentz, president of Toyota's U.S. sales division, just after he had the honours of unveiling the automaker's newest hybrid — Prius-c — at the recent auto show in Detroit.

Lentz felt some mainstream buyers have already made the shift, by virtue of their acceptance of the hybrid versions of Camry and Highlander. He admitted, however, that mainstream hybrid buyers have yet to show up "in abundance."

"But I think by the middle of this decade, it will become a mainstream technology," said Lentz.

Earlier, he had outlined how the company plans to grow its hybrid business: by getting more hybrids into the hands of early adopters of every stripe, and letting this increasingly larger group prove the righteousness of the technology (not his words exactly).

Then, these early adopters become advocates of the hybrid cause and help it reach broader appeal.

Well that's one way of looking at it. The other is that mainstream buyers have had lots of chances to take long, hard looks at hybrid technology and said "no thanks."

Lentz acknowledges that mainstream buyers are partially focused on fuel prices. If they go up, they should turn to hybrids. If they don't, they might not.

For that reason, he wouldn't hazard a guess as to what percentage of Toyota sales might be hybrids and/or other alternative technology in the next few years.

"The price of fuel is such an extreme driver of that," noted Lentz.

"Once hybrids are accepted throughout the mainstream, beyond the fluctuation of price, it will be easier to gauge that percentage."

But the hybrid plot certainly thickened with the introduction of this new Prius-c (the "c" is for city).

The newest member of the Prius family looks like a great, little hatch, even before you consider its billing as the most fuel-efficient vehicle you can buy without a plug. Toyota Canada says its combined city/highway rating is 3.7 L/100 km (53 mpg).

Also expect a starting MSRP below $21,000. Its desired audience is young, urban buyers previously priced out of the hybrid market. Lentz called it a "gateway" vehicle for hybrid technology.

"It's a key component to the overall Prius strategy, by adding substantial incremental sales, and more importantly getting advocates to the Prius family and to the broad acceptance of hybrids."

Running a red light? I'm telling!

GRAPHIC BY CHRISTINE DANILOFF

DRIVING FORCE

JIL McINTOSH
DRIVE@METRONEWS.CA

One of the most dangerous drivers is the "red-light runner" — one who, whether through inattention or impatience, doesn't stop at a red light.

Researchers are now working to predict which drivers are going to do this and potentially program your car to warn you.

Red-light runners can be identified because they don't have the right "braking profile," says Jonathan How, R.C. Maclaurin professor of aerospace at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (MIT).

"They're not slowing down, which could be a case of just having missed the light," he says.

"Or someone braking but not sufficiently, so the system would detect that they wouldn't likely stop in time."

By using these parameters, the MIT researchers came up with an algorithm that predicts when an oncoming car is likely to run a red light.

Testing with data collected from an actual intersection, they correctly identified red-light runners 85 per cent of the time, predicting within a couple of seconds whether a driver would run the light.

That could give other drivers enough time to react, providing they were given the information.

The ideal warning, How says, is through an existing technology called vehicle-to-vehicle (V2V) communication, in which cars wirelessly "talk" to each other to exchange information.

Using the information in the algorithm, a car that suspects its driver isn't going to stop would broadcast that to other cars approaching the intersection. Those cars would flash warnings to their drivers, who could then brake or take other evasive action.

How says the system, built into new cars and retrofitted to existing ones, could potentially hit the market in five to 10 years.

G8 a solid performer that packed punch

SECOND GEAR

JUSTIN PRITCHARD
DRIVE@METRONews.ca

For performance buffs, the Pontiac G8 was only slightly less attractive than owning a four-door Firebird.

Simple premise with this machine. Shoppers could bring about $36,495 to their Pontiac dealers and leave with a brand new sedan stuffed with a V-8 engine that spun the rear wheels.

The 160,000-kilometre powertrain warranty and airbags made it an easy sell to that significant other, too.

2008 to 2009 Pontiac G8

Engine

Standard G8's got a 3.6-litre V-6 with 256 horsepower. The G8 GT got a six-litre, 361 horsepower V-8. Automatic transmissions were standard on all models.

What owners like

A high-performance driving experience, aggressive styling and pleasing handling were mentioned by most G8 owners.

Spaciousness, muscular performance and even fuel economy were also highly rated.

What owners dislike

Complaints centre around cheap interior trim pieces, some fussy controls and difficult-to-recline front seats.

Common issues

Listen for popping, clunking, grinding or snapping sounds from the front end while travelling over bumps at various speeds and angles. Any unwelcome sounds likely mean a suspension component is worn out or in need of replacement.

A well-documented problem with premature lower control arm wear resulted in a service bulletin — so a GM dealer should be able to address the problem in quick order.

Verdict

The G8 looks like a solid, robust and reliable performer. Remaining factory warranty should provide used G8 shoppers plenty of confidence, too.

Shoppers after a muscle sedan shouldn't expect any serious issues on a well-maintained used G8.

Today's horoscope

♈ Aries March 21-April 20

You seem to be worrying about something that is not worth the hassle. It's best if you let it go.

♉ Taurus April 21-May 21

The message of the stars is clear: Don't be hasty. You will get your chance to shine early next month.

♊ Gemini May 22-June 21

You'll have to deal with someone's negative emotions today, without becoming negative yourself.

♋ Cancer June 22-July 22

Do you ignore a problem and hope that it will go away? Yes. This is one of those occasions when what looks like a problem really isn't.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 23

Be careful what you say today because if you are not, someone could take it the wrong way.

♍ Virgo Aug. 24-Sept. 22

Look on the bright side today, even if the news you receive is dark. According to the planets, you have little to worry about.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23

This is potentially one of the most exciting times of the year, so why are you so fearful that something bad is going to happen?

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22

Try not to dwell on news, especially if it involves people you care for.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21

The signals you are getting from colleagues are jumbled. It might be wise follow your instincts.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 20

You may be logical by nature but right now you are imagining weird and wonderful things. That's OK.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 21-Feb. 18

Although you feel confident and full of life, this is probably not a good day to take chances.

♓ Pisces Feb. 19-March 20

The Sun in Aquarius at this time of year makes you more suspicious than usual but maybe that's no bad thing. SALLY BROMPTON
